The nickname "rabbi" was applied to Adair by roommates. It was inspired by his partiality for garden foods.

He graduated from Princeton and studied at Harvard Law School for five years. His departure from Harvard was occasioned by the death of an uncle, Hildred Davis, who had managed the Panjira.

Adair, who inherited a share in the paper, returned to take a hand in running it.

Riverson spent a couple of years in the editor's office, but grew restless and decided to leave.

He returned to Northwestern University Law School and earned his degree in December, 1912.

With his schooling over, Stevenson set out for another look at Chicago before settling down to law.

Returning to the United States, the young attorney joined one of Chicago's oldest law firms. It was the boom year, 1917, and Stevenson worked on new leases of securities, then being marketed wholesale.

He began to move in wealthy society circles on Chicago's North Side and toward the end of 1918 married Ellen Borden, socially prominent daughter of an explorer.

Three sons were born of the marriage, which broke up in 1922. The first son, John, was born in 1919, the second, John, in 1921, and the third, John, in 1923.

The depreciable firm was turned from helping build financial structure to making money by selling and dismantling those that built the rocks.

In the present of Franklin D. Roosevelt to the presidency in 1933 brought Stevenson his first call to public life.

His father's firm management activities and agricultural expertise brought the elder Stevenson into contact with George Peck, who became a principal architect of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration under the New Deal.

Peck invited Adair to join the firm, as a legal aide, and the firm, then, 35, accepted, he was given the title "special counsel."

Think Its Hot—Then Don't Go to Death Valley

By The Associated Press

If this summer's steam—both weather has left you feeling like a boiled lobster, here's a vacation travel tip.

Steer clear of Cow Creek, in Death Valley, Calif. It's the nation's hottest spot.

Nobody lives at Cow Creek, a weather station 152 feet below sea level. But at Greenland Ranch on the heart of Death Valley, only 20 miles away, a nine-man crew of Pacific Coast Borax Company employees work the year 'round.

Charles A. Scholl, crew superintendent, recalls that his summer's high was only 120 degrees. He remembers it hit 132 in 1931.

Cow Creek's average daytime high in July last year was 117 degrees. It cooled off to an average of 80 at night and the overall average for the month was 90.

The station is taken by National Park Rangers who come down weekly from a 1,300-foot high Emigrant Pass.

Greenland Ranch has 32 acres of dates and 20 acres of alfalfa and a nice hole golf course adjacent.

Furnace Creek Inn, a winter spa, operated by Pacific Coast Borax, is a nice hole golf course adjacent.

The high average price was won by Mrs. John Hubbard who was served by the hostess.

On the conclusion of the meeting, the guests were served by Mrs. Vaughn Dillish.

Club Res Meeting

The Recreation Club met at the club house for the monthly meeting.

Delmar Daniel, president, presided over the meeting.

When the evening was spent visiting and the evening was spent visiting.

Ice cream and cake were enjoyed by members and five guests.

Mrs. J. Morrison and two children, Mrs. E. D. Dillish, and Mrs. Mary Dillish, were present.

Both Dillishs of Shreveport.

Tragedy Mars Childhood of Stevenson

Adrian B. Stevenson, 12, a tragic victim of a car accident, died last night in the hospital after a crash landing in a car.

By ROGER L. LANE

STEVENS, Ark. — A tragic accident which ended the childhood of a 12-year-old boy, Adrian B. Stevenson, occurred last night in a car.

Stevenson, who was driving the car, was killed instantly when the car rolled over on its side.

The crash occurred on Highway 101, near the intersection of Highway 102. The car was traveling southbound.

Stevenson was the only person in the car. He was wearing his seat belt at the time of the crash.

The car was a 1951 Ford. It was traveling at a speed of about 40 miles per hour when the crash occurred.

Stevenson was a member of the local youth group. He was a very popular boy in the community.

His father, Mr. B. Stevenson, was notified of the crash immediately. He arrived at the hospital shortly after the crash.

Stevenson was taken to the hospital where he was pronounced dead. The cause of the crash is still under investigation.

The funeral will be held on Thursday at 10 a.m. at the local church. Burial will be in the local cemetery.

Stevenson was a very bright boy. He was a member of the local youth group and was very active in his school.

His death is a great loss to the community. He was a very popular boy and his death is a tragedy for all.

The local youth group is holding a service for Stevenson on Wednesday at 7 p.m. at the local church.

Generals to Try Robert W. Grow

FT. MEADE, Md. — Seven major generals will sit in court martial today to hear charges that the man of their own rank, Maj. Gen. Robert W. Grow, was careless with secret military information.

The charges against the former military attaché to Moscow are that he made personal use of classified material, then was careless enough to let the Russians know of it.

The Soviet had a propaganda day with what they said were excerpts from Grow's diary.

The material attributed to Grow indicated its author wrote in a "diary" about the Soviet Union.

Generals to Try Robert W. Grow

FT. MEADE, Md. (AP)—Seven major generals will sit in court martial today to hear charges that the man of their own rank, Maj. Gen. Robert W. Grow, was careless with secret military information.

The charges against the former military attaché to Moscow are that he made personal notes of classified information, then was careless enough to let the Russians see them.

The Soviet Union had a propaganda day with what they said were excerpts from Grow's diary.

The material attributed to Grow indicated its author wrote in a derogatory way against Russia.

Conviction carries a possible five years' confinement, forfeiture of pay and dismissal from the service.

Democratic Nominees Both Reluctant

By JAMES MARLOW

WASHINGTON (AP)—The selection of Gen. Eisenhower and Gov. Stevenson as presidential candidates was not without its difficulties.

Both were reluctant candidates. Great support had been built up for both before either man actually said he would accept nomination.

Eisenhower didn't say so until last January although the campaign began in earnest in March.

Stevenson never publicly said he would accept until Friday before the third and final balloting began.

Arkansans Had Big Part in Convention

CHICAGO (Special)—Long before the convention assembled, it was predicted that the State of Arkansas would be a key state to watch.

There were several good reasons behind this. One was its two U. S. senators, Sen. John McClellan, while holding orthodox political views on such issues as civil rights, labor-management relations and civil rights, has for some time been considered a conservative Democrat of unquestioned party loyalty and moderate views.

The younger Arkansas Senator, J. William Fulbright, a little more liberal in his views than the senior senator, has established a record as an independent in his thinking and voting that has won the respect of his colleagues.

On this, Fulbright admits that it was a "compromise," and that it does not square entirely with the U. S. senator's right attitude, but he stoutly maintains that as a statement of general principle it is moderate and one that, properly viewed, is sound.

The Tumult and the Shouting Dies—and Cherry Is the Man

Boyd Tackett trusted to a helicopter but ran into a windmill. Francis Cherry's talkative nature was a liability.

Seriously, the tremendous vote which catapulted the Jonesboro chieftain into the runoff against Gov. McMath was the public's determined grasping for a candidate not immediately connected with state politics—if you consider, as I do, that the judiciary is somewhat removed from politics.

The verdict against Governor McMath and his bid for a third term was clear and decisive. Seventy per cent of the preferential primary vote.

With 200,159 votes reported to date from 1950 of the state's 2281 counties, the count was:

Baron 81,677; Rep. William L. Purdy of Camden 35,001; Ben Reed of Lonoke 31,801.

The successful candidate will be the Democratic nominee to succeed Gov. McMath.

Victory for the People, Declares Cherry

LITTLE ROCK (AP)—Chancellor Francis Cherry today heralded his surprising feat of winning a spot in the Democratic runoff election as a victory for the people.

Predicting that he would defeat Gov. McMath by 75,000 to 100,000 votes in the runoff, the Jonesboro judge said:

"I am deeply gratified. I think it is a victory for the people for the people's choice."

"I think the people have definitely rejected the McMath administration by an overwhelming majority."

Tragedy Mars Childhood of Stevenson

Adrian B. Stevenson, 12, a tragic figure in the life of his father, died yesterday afternoon at his home in Hope, Ark., after a long illness.

Stevenson was the second child of Mr. and Mrs. B. L. Stevenson, who have three children in all.

He was born on December 10, 1939, and was a member of the Hope Junior High School.

His death was the result of a long illness which began several months ago.

His father, Mr. Stevenson, is a well-known businessman in Hope and is the owner of the Stevenson Lumber Co.

His mother, Mrs. Stevenson, is a devoted homemaker and is the daughter of a prominent family in Hope.

His death was a great loss to his family and the community.

Funeral services will be held at the Hope Baptist Church on Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Interment will be in the Hope cemetery.

Those desiring to attend the funeral are requested to call at the church at 1 o'clock.

Wednesday, July 30
Midweek services at the First Baptist Church are as follows: 7 o'clock, Bible School Teachers and officers meeting; 7:45 Prayer and Bible study.

He cracked Prisoner on the neck and...

The high school "rabbi" was applied to Adlai by roommates. It was inspired by his partiality for Adlai.

He graduated from Princeton and studied at Harvard Law School for two years. He departed from Harvard was occasioned by the death of an uncle, Hiram Davidson, who had managed the Panjavia, which he inherited a share in the paper, returned to take a hand in running it.

Stevenson spent a couple of years in the editorial capacities, but grew restless and decided to leave the paper. He was then employed by Northwestern University Law School and earned his degree in law.

With his schooling over, Stevenson set out for another look at Chicago before settling down to a permanent home.

Returning to the United States, the young attorney joined one of Chicago's oldest law firms. It was the boom year, 1927, and Stevenson worked on new leases of securities, then being marketed wholesale.

He began to move in wealthy society circles on Chicago's North Side and toward the end of 1928 married Helen Borden, socially prominent daughter of an explorer.

Three sons were born of the marriage, which brought up the family in the city. The first, John, was born in 1929, and the second, Fred, in 1931.

The dearest of the three, a son, was born in 1933. He was named Adlai, after his father.

Stevenson's financial situation turned from being good to bad when he lost his job. He was then unemployed for a long time.

Think Its Hot—Then Don't Go to Death Valley

By The Associated Press

If this summer's steam—both weather has left you feeling like a boiled lobster, here's a vacation travel tip.

Steer clear of Cow Creek, in Death Valley, Calif. It's the nation's hottest spot.

Nobody lives at Cow Creek, a weather station 152 feet below sea level. But at Greenland Ranch on the heart of Death Valley, only 20 miles away, a nine-man crew of Pacific Coast Borax Company employees work the year 'round.

Charles A. Scholl, crew superintendent, recalls that his summer's high was only 120 degrees. He remembers it hit 132 in 1931.

Cow Creek's average daytime high in July last year was 117 degrees. It cooled off to an average of 80 at night and the overall average for the month was 90.

The readings are taken by National Park Rangers who come down weekly from a camp 1,300-foot high.

Greenland Ranch has 32 acres of dates and 20 acres of alfalfa and a nice hole golf course adjacent.

Furnace Creek Inn, a winter spa operated by Pacific Coast Borax, is a nice hole golf course adjacent.

The high course is little, if any, play between May 1 and Oct. 15.

Both were reluctant candidates. Great support had been built up for both before either man actually said he would accept nomination.

Eisenhower didn't say so until last January although the campaign among his supporters and him was not without its ups and downs.

Rose Makes No Claim to Being Master Mind

By CARL BEIL

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. — Big Glen Rose, who was drafted to return to the University of Arkansas as basketball coach this year, lets it be known that he doesn't consider himself a mastermind or miracle man despite his reputation for winning.

"Your success depends far more on the players you have than on what you tell the players," he told the student reporters. "The Arkansas Coaching School here yesterday."

"The coach who wins consistently is the coach who gets the good players year after year," he said. "The coach who doesn't win is the coach who doesn't get the good players."

"Regardless of your players, your job is to get the most out of the material you have. You have to fit your system to your material."

Rose advised high school coaches to develop basketball programs which will bring along good players. He suggested providing courts at grade schools and let the kids shoot.

The youth rally held at Baptist Church. An association youth rally of the WMCA of the local and regional churches met on Thursday at the local church for an all-day meeting.

After the swim, games were played and a picnic supper was served.

The lunch, poker-faced former basketball star who turned out to be a basketball coach, was the first of a series of basketball games which will bring along good players.

It won't be a running game, though, he explained. "I want you to recognize fast break opportunities and to use the fast break at the right time. I want you to be aggressive at all times."

Rose described the basketball situation in the Southwest Conference as a five-team affair. But if the coaches can't get it together, he said, "I don't believe in these long stints in the gym. I believe in a lot of practice."
